

Hello Argo!

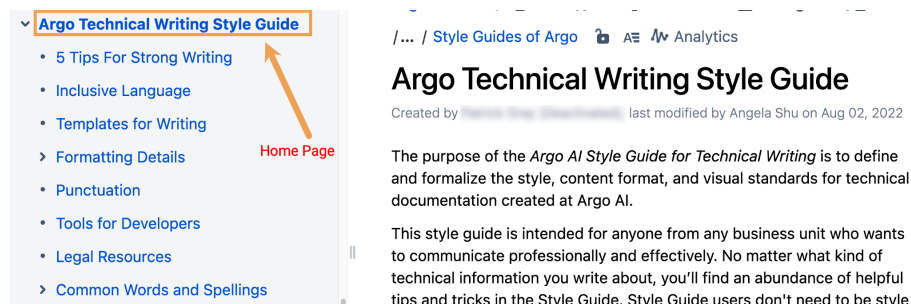

It's August, and students are gearing up to go back to school. In honor of the season, the Technical Writing team wants to teach Argo some writing tips. To do this, we've released an updated version of the Argo AI Technical Writing Style Guide, newly ported to Confluence!

What is the Style Guide?

The Style Guide is a set of technical writing guidelines at Argo. The style guide formalizes Argo documentation style standards and helps anyone who wants to communicate professionally and effectively.

Now let's proceed with a lesson about the recent changes to the Style Guide. Remember to take notes—you might be tested later! The Style Guide is divided into eight sections that each address specific elements of writing. You can access these sections on the Confluence sidebar or from the Style Guide home page.

The home page provides a high-level overview of each section, and provides additional resources for contacting the Technical Writing Team. Additionally, for all of the `Ctrl + F` experts out there, we've included a search bar under the Table of Contents on the Style Guide home page that searches for terms only within the Style Guide. Search to your heart's content!

Style Guide Search

To search for a term or concept within the Technical Writing Style Guide, use the search bar below.

We hope that you'll keep this Style Guide in your backpack for whenever you need assistance with writing at Argo. Happy learning!
